The girl? Oh . . . the girl? Well, this time it was Judy Hodges who took her place upon the hallowed ground. She posed for veteran lensman Sam Wu who, in his classic way, said: 'A loaf of bread, a jug of wine, and thou before me 'neath the beech.'

Sunny, being so well educated naturally had the brilliant idea of using her play house for a picnic.

Miss Betty Ann Scott, of the dark hair and green eyes, is an English girl from Stockport, Cheshire, who is not only beautiful in the finest of British tradition but also talented. After leaving college she's done everything from display advertising to newspaper reporting, and presently she's in London working as a model. And besides modeling, she's now breaking into show business via television, film parts, and her appearance in a West End revue. In her spare time—when she has any—Betty Ann enjoys horseback riding, tennis, writing, and listening to her hi-fi rig. Betty girl, do what?

NINA'S DAY

In Italy, where Nina Martin lives, the days are very nice indeed. When she wakes up this particular morning, the sun was busy warming the earth and waiting for her. She woke up quickly as this was much too fine a day to waste in bed. Already the house felt confining.

What to wear? Nina's tastes in clothes are simple, although she herself is sophisticated and has seen much of the world, including America. She thinks Washington is our nicest city because of its monumental beauty—and we think about the name of Nina. In case you ever meet her, she speaks English

Romance In Her Blood

About five and twenty years ago, a blond, golden Norwegian skipper sailed his yacht into the sun drenched port of Cadix, Spain, on a pleasant cruise. The cruise was pleasant—and romantic. He flipped for a Spanish gypsy girl. He wooed her in the moonlight and married her in Málaga. Three years later they were visiting relatives in Wisconsin, U.S.A., when their blue-eyed daughter was born. Look at the result of that romantic Miss Bonnie Logan (nee Norquest). She is cool as a Norse, warm as a gypsy, yet American as blueberry pie.
